RE: Response to comments on the DRAFT CSS Annual Status Report for 2010

The CSS Oversight Committee has discussed your request to include fall Chinook smolt-to-adult return rates and fall Chinook juvenile migration characteristics in the CSS analysis. The final version of the CSS Annual Status Report is due to the region on November 30, 2010. The time line for the contract deliverable does not allow the inclusion of fall Chinook data and analyses in the Annual Report for this year. However, the Oversight Committee has agreed to begin to review the available data, with the intention of including fall Chinook data and analyses in the CSS Annual Status Report for 2012. We appreciate Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife's continued support and participation in the Comparative Survival Study.

Subject: fall chinook update

I would like to have an update on Fall Chinook survival associated with passage through the hydrosystem. Please request that the Fish passage Center and the CSS Oversight Committee analyze and update fall Chinook smolt-to-adult return by route of passage through the hydrosystem. The analyses should include juvenile migration conditions and characteristics, such as survival, travel time and timing. Thanks... Ed
